SOURCE

1. Twenty-seven to thirty single-engine aircraft, at least four twin-engine planes and three biplanes, all covered with tarpaulins, were parked on the northern edge of the PINOW (N 63/V 38) airfield.

Description of single-engine planes: In-line engines, low-wing monoplane, rounded wing tips, small triangular rudder assembly mounted at rear, elevator assembly set high, retractable landing gear, rear section of single-seat cockpit fairing into fuselage, beginning about mid-wing, radiator set at bottom of fuselage.

2. Flying started about noon when visibility improved. One twin-engine and twelve single-engine aircraft, taking off at short intervals, proceeded in a western direction. They did not return within an hour.
3. Photographs were taken of the aircraft (see Annex).
4. Soviet Air Force soldiers were laying an underground 7-inch (sic) cable along the road to BIESENTHAL (N 53/Z 97) on the eastern edge of the field.
5. A radio or DF station was located in the direction of the main runway in the eastern section of the field. Four braced masts, each about 25 feet, were arranged in a square and interconnected by antenna wires. Two small cantonment buildings were nearby.

The following motor vehicles went towards the field:

Comment:

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

a. Report confirms the occupation of the field by fighters, apparently Yak-3s. According to the repeatedly counted aircraft, one regiment previously stationed in BRANDENBURG-ARADO is located there. The numerical designation of the regiment is not known.

b. The radio station mentioned in para 5 is presumably an ad-cock DF station.

c. Only one print of each photograph is transmitted as they do not contain essential information. LI-2s and apparently also Yak-3s are visible on the photos.
